Another round for everyone! A new pub will open to the students of Saint Leo University near the end of October, 1999. The establishment will be located at the front of the golf course across from the University College. Ben Donatelli, Vice President of Business Affairs and Chief Financial Officer, believes that this pub will give students a place to socialize that near to campus. "We think it gives them an alternative place to enjoy the campus.

It brings a little bit of Tampa to them," he said.

According to Donatelli, the pub will also include a restaurant, which will give students the option to use their bonus bucks in exchange for meals. In addition, the pub will operate on a full liquor license and will employ a well-trained staff to see to the needs of the students. "Anybody who works in that facility will have the proper training and will use common sense," he said. Donatelli further stated that there will also be a designated driver program set up for students who need transportation back to their homes. This service will be provided by security.

Matt Gour, a psychology student, believes the pub not only gives students a place to socialize, but it also gives them a good place to go in their free time. He thinks that there is a very important safety issue attached to having a bar so close to the campus. "It eliminates people from driving any-

University Change

August 24, 1999: on this day at 10:00 AM, Saint Leo College became the new Saint Leo University. This change signifies the beginning of a new era. After careful analysis of this institution, Dr. Kirk, its president, determined that Saint Leo was more complex and much larger than most private universities. So, in 1998, he began the long and involved process of changing Saint Leo to a university. "Saint Leo has been building toward this historic change for the past several years," said Kirk. "This status recognizes Saint Leo's size and complexity and advances our strategic vision as a 'Leading Catholic Teaching University of International Consequence for the Twenty-First Century.'" The change from college to university will recognize Saint Leo's commitment to the undergraduate and graduate programs.

Saint Leo has changed its name eleven times since the school was founded in 1889. Some names such as Saint Leo Military School, Saint Leo High School, Saint Leo

Grading Scale Changes

As well as changing from a college to a university, Saint Leo has changed its grading scale as well. It is now more difficult to achieve a high GPA than it used to be. Grades that were acceptable last year to maintain scholarships, to stay in programs, etc. may no longer be good enough. It seems unfair that continuing students are being punished for turning in the same level of work as they did in previous years. It is one thing to alter the grade scale as it applies to new students, but it is something completely different to alter it as it applies to students who have been at Saint Leo for one or more years.

Why was the change necessary in the first place? The old grading scale was deemed adequate for many years and the old numeric scale is still used by Saint Leo's own master's program. Was there really any need to make it more difficult to get good grades than it was already? Dr. Astolfi, the Vice President of Academic Affairs, has made the point that the grades of Saint Leo's students are inflated, and that the change is part of an attempt to rectify that situation. However, I would like to offer the idea that perhaps Saint Leo's students' high grades have been earned through hard work. If Saint Leo's average grades are higher than those of other colleges and universities, then perhaps it is because Saint Leo's students are above average. I think that it is unfair to punish the student body for exceeding expectations.

The change in the grading scale may well adversely affect students' standing within various disciplines and scholarship programs. Many scholarships and academic programs require a specific GPA for one to be accepted or to remain a part of them. For example, the education program requires a 2.5 GPA. Under last year's system, this meant the students had to maintain a C+ average. Under the new system, however, this means that the students must maintain between a C+ and a B-average. Therefore, to achieve the same results, students must do more work.

Who made the decision to change the grading system? During my research I found that there was very little faculty participation in the decision. In fact, the majority of the faculty was not officially notified of the alteration until a faculty meeting that was held on the Wednesday before classes started. There were no student committees or student participation of any kind either. When the student body left for the summer, one grading scale was in place. When they returned, it had been supplanted by another. After the decision was made, there seemed to be little if any effort put into notifying the student body. No memos or e-mails were sent out to the students at large. A decision of this magnitude is something that the students have a right to know about. While it is true that the Student Government Union hosted a question and answer session on the issue in late September, it was not widely advertised to the student population. Also, the decision had already been made. I believe it was too little too late.

All in all, I feel that the new grading system is unfair to students who expected to continue under the old scale. Although past grades will not be affected, future grades will be. Would it not be better to apply this new scale to new students only? Even if this change was truly necessary, was it necessary to punish continuing students? By: Jennifer Hawley, Assistant Editor

Power Problems

Jennifer Hawley
Assistant Editor

Saint Leo University is a voluntary participant in TECO Power's "load management program." This program allows TECO to turn off Saint Leo's power if they have difficulty in producing enough to serve all of their customers. The university is not consulted to determine if it is convenient for power to be lost at a given time.

At first glance, this may not seem like something that would of great concern to the student body. As Ben Donatelli,

Vice President of Business Affairs and Chief Financial Officer, said, "This has been a good arrangement for a number of years as TECO very rarely had to drop any customers." However, this was not the case during the last week of last year's spring semester. While students were writing final papers, preparing for exams, and even taking exams; the electricity was turned off on a number of occasions. These power outages often lasted several hours; and in many cases, the student body had little or no warning. Study time was adversely impacted and papers were lost. For example, Mike duDomaine, a senior education major, lost a significant portion of an important paper when his power (and his computer) was turned off. He had this to say, "People are upset and frustrated. They can't finish their papers, and there's no air conditioning." Mr. Donatelli explained the rash of outages in this manner:

"Unfortunately last spring the weather turned very hot very early in the season causing electrical demand to increase before TECO and many other

Honors Program

Janice Burford

The Honors Program has been a fixture on the Saint Leo scene since its inauguration in 1982. Like any organization on campus, the program has requirements that members have to achieve before being admitted: a high GPA in high school, high SAT scores, and high ACT scores. These traits help to provide the students with a common ground during their first semester as honors students.

The Honors Program follows a course guideline that has a foundation in the liberal arts. When asked what he thought students will learn from the program, Dr. Anderson stated, "They will learn something of the dialogical (conversational) and open-ended nature of thinking." This is a challenge for many instructors, but especially for Father Anthony Kissel, who began to teach Honors 151 last spring. In the beginning of the course, he said, "A couple of students suggested that some individuals in the program did not really apply themselves, or find the Honors Program/class challenging their intellectual potential." However, this view changed as the teacher and the students began to grow within the program. He continued, "Most members of the class began to be more attentive to the assigned readings, contributing to class discussions and to an enjoyable learning experience. I look forward with excitement to the opportunity to teach, and to learn with the class of 2003." When asked what she thought of the growth of honors students, Cindy Daly, a sophomore, stated, "Some people went in with closed minds, but in the end we found a common ground."

Another new beginning for the Honors Program is the integration of class-

Class of 2003

Who's in the house? This year's freshmen class comes to Saint Leo from all over the world. Students have traveled from 21 different states and at least 5 different countries. The diversity of the states ranges from California, Michigan, Oregon, Wisconsin, New York, Hawaii, and many more. International students come from Brazil, England, Romania, the Virgin Islands, Spain and even as far as Turkey. However, as varied as the members of this class may seem, approximately 60% of the 210-220 students are Florida residents, according to admissions.

For many of the students, Florida is a drastic change from their home state or country. Justin Ihara, Hawaiian native, stated, "Here there aren't any grass huts, and I don't have to hunt for my food." However, it is not only the material aspects that are different here. Romanian Tina Florea, noticed that the biggest difference was

"people's conception about life."

For the most part, everyone seems to have a favorable opinion about Saint Leo University. Katie Anelli, Florida resident, commented that, "Everyone is really friendly here." Katie also stated her only complaint was "the distance from the freshman dorms to the rest of the campus." Justin Ihara appreciates Saint Leo's setting because "It's small and peaceful here."

Some students are already very homesick, and that will be the first time they will get to return home is Christam Break. While others, like Katie Anelli, who lives a short two hours away, have already gone back for a visit. She said, "I wouldn't want to be any farther away. This way I can go home on the weekends if I want to."

Everyone comes to Saint Leo University for different initial reasons, but hopefully all feel welcome here. Our main goal is to unite and make this a makeshift home, at least for the time being.

The Psychology Club, located at Saint Leo University, will jump back into action after its summertime siesta. Beginning on September 15, meetings will be held in the Cage every Wednesday at 12:30 PM.

According to Amy Wilson, president of the Psychology Club, some of the activities that will be taking place during this semester will include trips to The Florida Mental Health Institute, The Malibu Grand Prix, and a series of psychology presentations at the University of South Florida. "This year the Psychology Club wants to make fun for people interested in the psychological field of study, to learn more about their specified interests, and to be involved with their community," she said.

Dr. Richard Bryan, Moderator for the Psychology Club, also has high hopes for this year's club. "Based on the goals and experiences of this year's officers, I am really hopeful that this year will be full of activities that fulfill the purposes of the Psychology Club: to participate in leadership skills, to develop camaraderie, and to develop leadership skills," he said. In addition, he feels that this club will create an invaluable outside class learning experience for students interested in the psychology major. Bryan also hopes that PSYCHI, a national honors society for psychology majors and graduates, will take an active role in further promoting the activities of the Psychology Club.

Even students outside of the psychological field of study say that they can see the potential this club offers. According to Page Batton, a biology major, "It would help create awareness for incoming students who don't know about what the field of psychology entails." In addition, Joane Beauvais, a criminology major, feels that it would give the opportunity for ideas about psychology to be exchanged back and forth between the students.

8 New Faces in Old Places

Katie Sewell
Staff Writer

For many returning students, the name "Dr. Vitale" may sound familiar. Dr. Vitale has worked for Saint Leo Student Affairs for the past two years as the Director of Counseling. She took over the position of Interim Director of Student Affairs upon Dr. Maureen Powers' leaving. Dr. Powers reportedly left to move closer to her family. Dr. Vitale spent the last 10 years in student affairs work, primarily at the University of South Dakota where she served as staff psychologist at the Student Counseling Center. She was also an adjunct member of the faculty and taught graduate and undergraduate courses before joining Saint Leo as the Director of Counseling in 1997. She has published in the areas of Rape Counseling and College Student Motivation. The American Mental Health Counselors' Association also awarded her The 1997-1998 National Mental Health Counselor of the Year Award.

As Dr. Vitale begins her third year here at Saint Leo, there are several changes that greet her. Dr. Vitale says, "It is an exciting time to be at Saint Leo." Dr. Vitale took over the position of Interim Director of Student Affairs on August 15th, right before Saint Leo became a University. "As a division, I hope to provide a steadiness in the transition of Dr. Powers leaving." Although the turnover rate in Student Affairs has been high, Dr. Vitale believes that things are improving with time. The new faces in Student Affairs include Dr. John Schlicker Sr. as the Interim Director of Student Counseling Services, Julie Ciccarone as Director of Residence Life, Sarah Richard-Armedlouz as Assistant Director of Residence Life and Hall Director for Alumni and Roderick Halls, and Michael Ryan as Hall Director of Benoit Hall. Dr. Vitale is pleased to be working with the outstanding staff in DeChantal Hall.

On a personal

note, Dr. Vitale would like to say the following: "I would like to warmly welcome our International students into the Saint Leo University College. I am excited about the implementation of our international program. It is an outstanding opportunity for all of us to interact. My door is always open, and I will always return calls and messages within a 12-24 hour time period. There is no issue that we can't work out together. As the new SLU steps into the year 2000, I hope that we can re-establish a sense of pride in who we are as students, faculty, and staff of Saint Leo University."

A Sad Farewell

The Saint Leo University community mourns the loss of Addie Poznar, who passed away in August. The student body may remember Mrs. Poznar from her work in the writing center, where she served as a tutor until the end of last semester. Professor Maura Snyder had this to say of her work, "In my opinion, she was the best tutor we have ever had." Lauri Barton, who worked closely with Mrs. Poznar, has fond memories of her: "Addie loved her students. She loved her job. She was always happy to help anyone who came into the office." As Dr. Mary Spoto, head of the English department remarked, "She was a very knowledgeable, dedicated tutor, with prior experience as a teacher. We were very fortunate to have her. Students would request her from year to year." Before coming to Saint Leo, Mrs. Poznar taught at Pasco High School. Shortly after the end of the semester, she underwent a heart surgery. Soon thereafter, she slipped into a coma and died about a month later. As Professor Snyder said, "We'll miss her in the writing center. She was a nice person."

Addie Poznar is survived by her husband, Dr. Poznar (a Saint Leo English professor), and their three children. In lieu of flowers, the Poznar family asks that donations be made to the Saint Leo University Library in Mrs. Poznar's name. The sympathy of the entire Monarch newspaper staff goes out to the Poznar family.

he was a member of the SGU Production Crew. "I'd like to be able to get more commuters involved in SGU activities by advertising to them through the Commuter Chair." He also wants to get information out to all students about upcoming events ahead of time. This way, anyone who would like to participate in the events may do so. Spell plans on doing his best to inform students of Student Government events.

Activities Coordinator Melinda Amaral, is a junior majoring in Psychology. She has had no previous experience in Student Government. Her goal for this year's SGU is to have more student involvement in the decision making process for activities. "I want to be able to accommodate students with the activities they want and do more activities than the SGUs of the past." Amaral is busy planning activities to places like Pleasure Island and Halloween Horror Nights at Universal Studios.

The Student Government Union Executive Board Members have all said the same thing as far as politics after college. As much as they are enjoying their Saint Leo University experience, none wish to pursue politics after college.

The Student Government Meetings are every Monday at 4:30 in Selby Auditorium. All students are welcome.

Food: Pancho's Villa

Jay Kubica
Staff Writer

San Antonio harbors many wonders, one of which is a Mexican restaurant unsurpassed in culinary excellence and ethnic atmosphere. This restaurant is Pancho's Villa, and it serves beans, lots of beans.

Pancho's Villa lies in downtown San Antonio, nestled snugly in the heart of the bustling commercial district. Being in San Antonio, those at Pancho's Villa know what picante sauce tastes like. According to Kathy Franks, an employee at Pancho's Villa, their salsa and chips, as well as most of the rest of the menu items, are homemade. For students at Saint Leo University, Pancho's Villa is a favorite food provider. "I enjoy eating there: good service, reasonable prices, and real Mexican food," Freshman Sean Marshall said.

"It's a quaint little place with great food,"

Freshman Amber Davis said.

"The John Wayne cutout is the coolest!" Davis added. A typical meal at Pancho's Villa starts out with a basket of warm tortilla chips and fresh salsa, in both hot and mild varieties. The burritos, chimichanga, enchiladas, and fajitas are the most popular entrees. The chimichanga platter comes with a healthy serving of cheese-covered beans, sour cream, guacamole, and rice. The chimichanga itself is a supple flour tortilla filled to capacity with hot beef. The fun doesn't stop there; oh no. Pancho's offers several freshly made Mexican desserts that are truly irresistible. Among the offerings are flan, fried ice cream, and a platter of sugar- and honey-coated pastries. The fried ice cream is made by coating ice cream in Angel Food cake and frying it. Pancho's Villa is a landmark of culinary excellence in San Antonio.

Movie: Blair Witch Project

Nikki Franchini
Staff Writer

Picture this: Two UCF students make an independent movie about a witch. The media hypes it as the scariest movie this year. "I kept squeezing my girlfriend's hand and my back was sweating. I really got into it," explains Joe Crook, a junior. He went on, with intensity, telling his version of the Blair Witch Project.

This low-budget film starts out with three film students planning to film a documentary about a witch who lives in the Burkittsville, Maryland woods. Got you yet? The plot thickens when the group goes out into the woods and starts filming about the myths that they have gathered from the town-folk. Odd things start happening to the group and the legend of the Blair Witch becomes real. You are so caught up in the movie that you do not get a chance to refill your orange soda.

"I thought it was too real and my girlfriend started crying," comments Eamon Parcels, a freshman. This movie is definitely a "grab me, honey, I am scared" film. "This movie really makes you think. I thought it was awesome," comments Heather Rivera, a freshman. I have seen it twice and recommend it to people who appreciate the artistic value it holds. This movie will keep you on the edge of your seat begging for more. Check out the web site dedicated to this fantastic film at <http://www.blairwitch.com>. Beware though, we might have our own Blair Witch in the Saint Leo woods.

10 Greek Column

The Greek Council is entering its 5th year as a united organization. The 1999-2000 officers are: President, Regina Guerra; Vice President, Kiara Wilson; Treasurer, Meagan Gillick; Secretary, Becky Schulte; Men's Rush, Pete Motherway; Women's Rush, Jacki Gay; Social Chair, Bambi Daignault; and Athletic Chair, Janelle Haley.

The Greek Council consists of 10 Greek Social Organizations: six Fraternities and four Sororities. There are two types of Greek organizations: local and national. Local means that the organization was specifically created for this campus. National means that the organization was begun on a campus and has expanded nation-wide with different chapters at different campuses.

This year, Greek Council is working on its internal structure and campus-wide visibility. The two main structural changes are a splitting of the Vice Presidency and a New Member Article in the Greek Council Constitution which includes a Probation period and Probation Committee.

The splitting of the Vice Presidency will allow a more balanced representation on the executive board. The new titles will be Vice President of Sororities and Vice President of Fraternities. The New Member Article and the Probation Period and Committee allows new groups to become part of Greek Council. Both of these new ideas will stabilize the Greek Council and enable the Greek Community to take a more active role in the campus community.

This year the Greek Council will be adopting a spot on campus for a campus clean up and participating in various campus and community activities such as: Fall Festival, Community Service Day, Rattle Snake Festival, Greek Week, Greek Formal, and many other up coming events.

The Greek Council meetings are held every Thursday at 5:00pm in Crawford Hall. All are welcome to come and see what is going on or to ask questions about Greek life in general.

room learning with the use of computers. This began last year with the freshmen students. Dr. Reynolds sees the computers as tools and says, "We are exploring the ways in which computers can be used to enhance a great books/collective-discussion teaching format." This seems to be the consensus among the students. Lou Schaber, a sophomore, has said, "I feel the use of computers in Honors is beneficial to myself and other students in the program. It gives all of us a chance to learn more about our technological environment." Kurt van Wilt, the Freshman Honors English instructor, sees the computers as having "an aesthetic element to them in designing web pages and recording work."

The Honors Program has been growing ever since its birth in 1982. The students and faculty alike hope that the Program will continue to grow in the years to come.

where. They are less likely to drink and drive," he said. Moreover, Shan Anderson, an English major, feels that this establishment will open up a completely new social avenue for students. "It seems year after year students are screaming for activities to do on campus, and with the closing of the coffeehouse, it's nice to know the school is finding other alternatives," she said.

Tom Shea, Men's and Women's Golf Coach for Saint Leo, claims that the pub will also be a great opportunity to bring in some extra business for the golf club. "It will be a great avenue to bring in outside activities," he said.

If you have any suggestions concerning the future name of the pub, please contact Ben Donatelli at (352) 588-8215.

Florida utilities had finished the normal winter preventive maintenance work on their generators. Also there was a major explosion and a fire in a TECO generating facility. These events caused TECO to drop more customers than it had ever dropped during non-summer months."

To allow students to finish the year in some comfort, Saint Leo rented several generators to power the cafeteria, classrooms, and various other buildings. The main emphasis was on buildings that see the most use during the hotter daylight hours. Therefore, buildings such as residence halls were not a top priority. This rental cost the school over $35,000.

TECO normally drops customers only during the hottest parts of the year, and when contacted, Mr. Donatelli did not believe that any such outages would occur at any time during this semester. However, on Tuesday, September 28, 1999, the faculty was informed that a power outage was expected to occur. This situation has the ability to impact large numbers of students simultaneously.

Saint Leo University plans to remain a part of this "load management program." According to Mr. Donatelli, $500,000 has been saved as a consequence of Saint Leo's long-term participation in this plan. However, in order to prevent the inconvenience of last year from reoccurring, Saint Leo plans to construct a backup power generation system at some point during the coming year.

12 Convocation

Shannon Letcher
Staff Writer

On September 2nd, students and faculty attended the 11th Annual Convocation for the 1999-2000 school year, the first here at Saint Leo University. The Mass was celebrated by Father Michael Cooper, S.J., S.T.D. For some students, it was just another convocation. However, for first year and transfer students, it was a new adventure, as they began their long road to the ultimate goal of receiving their University diploma. Two first-year students presented Dr.

Kirk a plaque with the new university logo and the signatures of the new students. With the new alma mater, the return of the lion as mascot and the name change, the convocation had a feeling of merriment and new beginnings for everyone. The students were blessed to have our new alma mater performed with an intense amount of emotion by Carrie Corbett, accompanied by Dr. Adrienne Shannon. It was written by our own Professor Kurt Van Wilt. Dr. Kirk presented the University's first president, Fr. Stephen Herrman, with the presidential medallion. Until this year, he was the only president who had not received this medallion. In addition, the keynote speaker was Dr. Robert Atwell, the President Emeritus of the American Council on Education. He was presented with the University's first Doctor of Humane Letters degree. He spoke of economics and its effects upon the political system, along with many other things. Sophomore Michael Iafrato, who has been a student at Saint Leo since 1993, stated, "Of all of the convocations I have attended, this was the largest and most spiritual. It is a great start to the new Saint Leo University."

are very friendly. He likes computers and stresses the fact that without them we would be "lost", and it is important for everyone to be able to operate them. He jokes about having to take a driving test again despite the fact that he has been driving for the past twenty-five years.

Dr. Bal's office is located in Saint Edward Hall room 214. He welcomes any visitors and is looking forward to meeting those interested in Computer Science.

Moore is a asset to the department. "He is a great addition to the department," Iafrato said. "We will learn so much from him."

Moore hopes to teach his classes valuable lessons for the future. He has wise words of advice for the student body. "Embrace all you can to forward the mission of the university—becoming a leading Catholic University with International consequence. By way of doing this, you have given yourselves more opportunities while leaving a legacy for those who follow."
