

In brief

Poznar published

Two articles by Dr. Walter Poznar, professor of humanities, have been accepted for publication. "Why Study the Humanities? and Other Tough Questions" has been accepted by Humanities Education, sponsored by the University of Minnesota at Deluth. "Life and Play in Wilde's 'The Importance of Being Earnest'" has been accepted by The Midwest Quarterly, published at Kansas State College of Pittsburg.

TV working

Believe it or not - the Student Center's Television is working again! MTV, basketball games and soap operas will be televised daily and nightly! However, in an effort to establish the Hazel Whitman Lounge as an area for students to watch TV, read, eat and/or study, organizations will no longer be able to reserve the room for meetings.

Reservations for Lion's Lounge, Duncan Lounge, or Crawford Hall may be made in the office of Student Development. The director of food services, Dan Cappa, and Pat Zoeller are willing to help your group find a spot convenient for your meeting. Please let us know if this causes difficulty.

Faculty on TV

Dr. Jim Horgan, chairperson of the Division of Social Science, and Dr. Joe Cernik, associate professor of political science, appeared on WEDU-TV (Channel 3), recently, discussing a book they are writing on "The Reagan Years." Joining Cernik and Horgan in authorship of the book are Dr. Lucy Fuchs, chairperson of the Division of Education; Dr. Jack McTague, professor of history; Terry Danner, assistant professor of criminology; and Chuck Fisk, assistant professor of business administration.

Tentative publication date for the book is March, 1988.

And now, the movie

A brand-new video about Saint Leo College has been produced by The Office of Institutional Advancement (formerly the Public Affairs and Development offices). The eight-minute video is a visual essay of the College, hosted by College president Msgr. Frank M. Mouch.

Plans are being developed that will allow all members of the College community to view the new video.

Tap, tap 'Austin on Tap' a unique group

Tap dancing in cowboy boots? In tennis shoes? To the music of John Phillip Sousa? That's only a sampling of the unexpected delights that await when "Austin on Tap" appears at Saint Leo College's Bowman Activities Center Saturday, Jan. 30, at 8:15 p.m. The five female tap dancers who comprise "Austin on Tap" put on a show that is equal parts dancing and comedy—with a double dose of pure showmanship. One of the nation's few professional tap dance companies, "they have enough energy, flash, precision and style that, if you look close, you might catch a wisp of smoke curling off their spit polish," says the Daily Texan. "They're a national treasure," exclaims a spokesman for the University of Texas/San Antonio while an Austin Chronicle reporter notes that "My teeth dried out from grinning so much."

Created in 1982, the troupe is a non-profit, educational organization dedicated to the preservation, expansion and performance of the only true American form of dance: tap. "Austin on Tap" provides an evening of dance variations from traditional tap to jazz, country and western, modern and classical, all with unique tap choreography to the music of Joe Jackson, the Manhattan Transfer, Leon Redbone, John Phillip Sousa and many more. In everything from cowboy boots to tennis shoes, from the hoedown flavor of "Bluebonnet Special" to "Rhythm and Motion," an exploration of syncopated rhythms and silhouette music done entirely with the music of dancers' feet, Austin on Tap provides an evening to remember.

General admission tickets for the Saint Leo College Cultural Series offering are $10; senior citizen tickets are $5, student tickets are $2.50, and college personnel $5. To make reservations, or for more information, call (904) 588-8252.

'AUSTIN ON TAP' will perform at the Bowman Activities Center January 30 at 8:15 p.m.

How to survive as a freshman at Saint Leo College

by DARLINDA BOGART
Monarch Staff Writer

As I see it, there are two dominating forces which pull on a freshman the first semester of college life. The first, and stronger of the two, is the need to establish an academic and social life, with the right balance of each. The second is the need to appease your parents. Here are some suggestions to help get you through that first semester, which is really the hardest.

1. Don't hide in your room! I know it can be very scary, but it is very important for you to get out and introduce yourself. Mingle and smile. There are lots of freshmen out there feeling just like you, and I think the upperclassmen remember those feelings too.

2. Read the "Daily Say-So" and the "Monarch" so you can be well aware of what's happening on campus. The more activities you take part in, the more opportunities you have to make friends and look less like a "confused freshman."

3. Join any clubs that interest you. Being around people with interests similar to your own might give you something to talk about, thus providing a great place for you to start building your social life.

4. Attend sports events, socials, and dances. These are great places to meet people and someplace for you to get lost in a crowd if you're feeling like a sore thumb.

5. In the midst of all this social bliss, let's not forget why you're here in the first place, to get a "higher" education. In order for you to pass your courses, you must ATTEND CLASS. As painful as it may be, going to class is also a way to meet others. If you are experiencing difficulty in any (or all) of your classes, do not be afraid to ask for help. Ask your teachers, fellow classmates, or take advantage of the math, reading, and writing labs. However, you must first show that you are making your best effort. Read the assignments given and spend at least one to two hours preparing for each class you have. Some classes will not require that much time, such as physical education, but extra time may need to be allotted for one of your tougher classes. Remember, keeping your grades up will keep you in good graces with your parents, (which translates into them sending you more money and care packages!).

6. Lastly, and most importantly, try to stay out of trouble, if at all possible. Avoid "excessive" extra-curricular activities. And particularly, don't be caught in the dorm of the opposite sex after visiting hours. (They don't like that at all!). Get to know your RA and RD well.

Good luck and have an awesome year! (Just think, eight short months from now you'll no longer be a freshman -hopefully!)

Change remains

By CYNDEE THOMAS
Monarch Editor

What can be said in life that is sure to be guaranteed is that death comes and taxes must be paid. But maybe the only real inevitability is change.

Change is what always occurs in our life. We are kicking off another semester which will surely change our direction in some way. As we change, let us funnel this into a positive direction in the year ahead.

At Saint Leo College, the waves of change pushed over into administrative boundaries in 1987 but as leadership grows so should student leadership in 1988.

Leadership takes a special "leader" and to those leaders "hats off," because they do a terrific job; but may the ranks give their support and confidence to the leader. Being a leader will take on added importance in the months ahead, as student leaders change due to graduation. Now is the time for building a smooth transition in the year ahead, which can lead to preserving the new traditions kicked off in 1987.

The tradition for leaders that is set will be followed as a new face appears on the scene in 1988. Leaders must rise to the occasion and blaze new trails for a tradition to be handed down.

Tradition keeps on at the Monarch. We will continue working with your spirit of cooperation and presenting the newest of changes in 1988 that come your way at Saint Leo College.

My turn: We're the problem at Saint Leo

By KATHLEEN DELANEY
Monarch Staff Writer

Well, Campers, here we are back at "Leo Land" for our second semester. Wowzers. Isn't this exciting. Back to early mornings and essay exams. I hope everyone is ready to jump into the new year of brain activity. I know I am. I've been looking forward to hearing who transferred out of Saint Leo because it was so boring!

Anyway, over the holidays I came to a realization: Saint Leo has a very extensive problem. Do you know what that problem is, my friends? School participation. What?! Did I hear the familiar chorus of "There isn't anything to do on campus," or "We're in the middle of BFE." HMMM. Whose fault is this? The faculty? The administration? No, no, I don't think so. Tired of guessing?

It's ours. The students of Saint Leo College. Yup, ours. I hope that doesn't come as a shock to you. I don't think I can stand to hear another conversation about the dull atmosphere Saint Leo seems to reek. I hate to be brutally honest with you fellas, but it's not the school that is dull, it's the student body.

CUB has done a great job of providing students with activities during the week and weekends, but no one seems to go. That's pretty sad. People complain about having nothing to do, yet CUB has offered a variety of things.

To tell you the truth, I don't see how students can get their jollies by consuming mass quantities of carbonated hops and barley in order to put themselves in a position where they lose control of their actions. It kills me. I could have a better time counting the French fries in the freezer of the McDonald Center freezer.

Do you have any idea what I'm trying to say? It sickens me to hear that people have to go to Tampa to have a good time. But that's not the point, it's just an example. The point I hope I've made is that Saint Leo is a very nice domain to reside in and to have fun in. We need a great deal more student participation. That's all. Have you ever heard of Pictionary?? It's great.

Ivy schools, Stanford favor Dukakis

(CPS)—Ivy League and Stanford students—arguably among the most academically talented in the U.S.—tend to favor Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis for president in 1988, a poll conducted by newspapers at those schools indicates.

Dukakis' lead, however, was far from overwhelming. Most of the students polled—51 percent—said they had not decided who they will support.

And although 12 percent of the respondents supported Dukakis, a liberal Democrat, 10 percent said they supported more conservative Republican Sen. Bob Dole, who finished second in the poll.

A slim majority of the students polled—51 percent—also said President Reagan has done an "excellent" or "satisfactory" job. Otherwise, 80 percent of the respondents favored legal abortion, 73 percent opposed a peacetime draft and 70 percent said the Reagan administration has been insensitive to student needs.

Fifty-seven percent of the respondents also opposed aid to the Nicaraguan contras.

Vice President George Bush finished third in the poll, gaining support from six percent of the respondents. Rev. Jesse Jackson and Illinois Senator Paul Simon were each selected by four percent of those polled, and former Delaware Gov. Pete Du Pont and New York Rep. Jack Kemp each received support from 1.5 percent.

The survey was conducted by the major student newspapers at Stanford, Brown, Cornell, Columbia, Dartmouth, Harvard, Princeton, Penn and Yale. About 2,500 students participated in the poll.

Campus ministry update

Sister Geraldine Warthling, O.S.F., has been appointed assistant to the president for Campus Ministry at Saint Leo College.

Campus Ministry is the college department that has immediate responsibility for maintaining the religious dimension of campus life.

Sister Geraldine recently completed six years as director of Theological Field Education and professor of Pastoral Ministry at Pontifical College Josephinum in Columbus, Ohio. She's also served as head of the Religion Department at Wehrle High School in Columbus, as head of the Mathematics Department at Charleston (W.Va.) Catholic High School and at Rosary High School in Columbus.

A native of Buffalo, N.Y., Sister Geraldine has served as a consultant for "Catholic Teachers' Guide." She's been a member of the Midwest Association of Spiritual Directors, the Association of Theological Field Educators and the Catholic Association of Theological Field Educators.

A member of the Sisters of St. Francis of Penance and Christian Charity, she earned a bachelor of arts degree in mathematics from Damen College in Buffalo and a master of arts degree in theology from Manhattan College in the Bronx.

Sister Geraldine says that her top priority is to become acquainted with Saint Leo College.

"I want to get to know the college and—although this sounds Herculean—to try and talk to every person on campus that I can, from department head to cafeteria worker. I want to find out what people's image of Campus Ministry is; I want to expand its horizon and you can't do that without talking to people. And that's because Campus Ministry isn't meant for any specific segment of the campus community, but is an umbrella for the college—the entire college."

Sister Mary Clare Neuhofer, O.S.B., who directed Campus Ministry fall semester, is on sabbatical leave.

'Parade in Paris' rocks

By KATHLEEN DELANEY
Monarch Staff Writer

The "New Music" scene is being bombarded by local talent ranging from Orlando to St. Petersburg. Not many bands have what it takes to break away from the local scene and receive airplay or even open up for a top group. One band in particular has not only broken away from backyard parties, but has gotten airplay and had two albums released. This band is from St. Pete and they call themselves "Parade in Paris."

"Parade in Paris," consisting of five members, Brian Merrill (vocals), John McNichols (lead guitar), Dave Christophere (keyboards), Sean Delong (bass), and Steve Webb (drums), came into existence almost two years ago in St. Pete. Since then, "Parade in Paris" has played alongside bands such as "The Fixx," "Love and Rockets," "Pseudo Echo," "Beat Rodeo," and "Concrete Blond." The band has also had engagements in Miami, Club Detroit, Club 19, Club 1235, and they performed an outrageous, sold-out performance at Pasco Hernando Community College.

What's their style? One band member, John McNichols, says jokingly that it is "post modern folk." However, any listener can conclude that it is danceable. Some consider it to be Top 40. Yet, it all boils down to their own original sound—called New Music.

"Parade in Paris" currently has two albums in circulation. "Ambient Pictures" sold 1,000 copies locally and one song received airplay on Y95. A second album, entitled "Fear of Fascination," may be even more successful than the first.

Look for another knockout performance by "Parade in Paris" at Saint Leo this semester.

Reviews: Sting album tops

By JOHN ASHFIELD
Monarch Staff Writer

Sting—Nothing like the Sun (A&M)
One of the best records of the year. "They dance alone" and "We'll be together" are the best songs. This album is a must for anyone's record collection.

Parade in Paris—Ambient Pictures (independent)
A very good type. Sort of like The Fixx in Florida. Maybe this band will make it, maybe not. But they are loads better than Tiffany and Debbie Gibson combined.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: See above story about this interesting band.)

The Howe Martins—People who grinned themselves to death (Electra)
Do not buy this album unless you like the Housemartins. This record is almost identical to their first album. If you like their music, you'll love this record. Otherwise, forget it.

George Michael—Faith (Columbia)
SURPRISE! George Michael sounds exactly the same as he did in Wham! Maybe he didn't need Andrew Ridgley after all. This record is a good one. "Faith" is a fantastic song. "I Want Your Sex" is definitely the worst. It's O.K.!

TRANSLATOR—A retrospective (Columbia)

Best songs, "UN-Along," "O Lazorus" and "Everywhere." This band is like an unpretentious R.E.M. Unfortunately, this band has broken up. They deserved more success than they achieved. Their best known song is probably "Everywhere Where I'm Not." If this album sells, perhaps they won't break up. Buy it!

The Call—Into the Woods (Electra)
Their best known song is "The Walls Came Down." While this album contains no flat-out great song like that, it is a good record. Sometimes The Call sounds very whining, but they're at least worth one listen. Perhaps someone will buy this instead of Debbie Gibson's. Who knows?

Monarchs = Dominos

By PAT YASINSKAS
Monarch Sports Editor

In the form of injury, illness and academic difficulty, the domino theory has proven itself true for the Saint Leo College men's basketball team. The Monarchs began to fall like dominos—one after another. At one point, over the Christmas break, Coach Gary Richert had only six players available. Things were so bad that Richert's 15-year-old son, Tim, had to practice with the team, just so they could have enough people to scrimmage.

The first sign of trouble came in the pre-season, when forward Ron Taylor broke his wrist. Taylor was the team's second-leading scorer and rebounder last season, when he averaged 12.7 points and seven rebounds per game.

The dominos continued to fall when starting guard Brian Richert went out with an ankle injury, and reserve guard Craig Madzinski separated his shoulder. The situation got even worse when sophomore guard Angres Thorpe contracted mononucleosis. Then came the fall semester grades and starting center Earl Williams and freshman forward Matt Murphy were declared academically ineligible. The last domino fell down when senior forward Duane Fort went down with an ankle injury. Fort was averaging 17 points a game and was leading the Monarchs in rebounding.

Due to the lack of numbers, Coach Richert was forced to use several players out of position. Reserve guard Steve Ceseretti was inserted into the starting lineup as a forward. Seldom-used freshman Richard Slader was suddenly the Monarch's starting center. While Todd Willhite, Brad Richert and Tyburn Debellotte shared the backcourt duties.

The one bright spot during the stretch was the play of Mark Van Gerpen. The 6-4 junior picked up the offensive slack by increasing his scoring average to 19 points per game.

On Jan. 9, the Monarchs began the road to recovery. Fort, Madzinski and Thorpe returned to the lineup and the Monarchs defeated Caldwell College 75-72. Van Gerpen led all scorers with 33 points, while Fort chipped in with 20 points. The victory improved the Monarchs' record to 5-7.

Williams and Murphy will be gone for the remainder of the season but may return next year. Taylor and Brian Richert are still recovering from their injuries and there is a possibility that they may be redshirted.
