Pontifical Mass celebrated at Abbey Church

By MICHAEL SHAW
Monarch Staff Writer

As part of a year-long schedule of events planned to celebrate the college's twenty-fifth year in higher education, a Pontifical Mass was offered with W. Thomas Larkin, Bishop of St. Petersburg, as the main celebrant.

"All the way through," reflected college president Dr. Thomas Southard who read at the mass, "I was very impressed to see so many main celebrants on the altar at one time. I thought the music was outstanding, and the Bishop's homily a classic."

On the altar to assist Bishop Larkin was college chaplain Reverend James C. Kelly, Reverend Fidelis J. Dunlap and the Auxiliary Bishop of Saint Petersburg, J. Keith Symons, who was recently promoted to Bishop of Tallahassee/Pensacola. "This mass was particularly special to Bishop Symons," said President Southard candidly, "because he is a Benedictine Oblat" and is on the Board of Trustees of the college which was founded by monks of the Benedictine Order. For thirteen years, Bishop Larkin was also on the board.

While the turnout filled the Saint Leo Abbey

Church, many students, whether they attended or not, do not know exactly what a Pontifical Mass is. "A Pontifical Mass simply means," explained Reverend Kelly, "a mass that is celebrated by a bishop. Pontifical comes from the Latin word pontifex which is another name for bishop. It has a special significance to Catholics because he is the high priest." Reverend Kelly, who read from the Gospel according to John during the mass, also said of the celebration: "By inviting 94 pastors, the college is reaching out to people and letting them know they're welcome. We want them to feel that they are always welcome."

Members of the Saint Leo College faculty attended the mass dressed in full academic regalia and preceded the students who attended on a walk from the center forward of Saint Edward Hall to the church. Sister Dorothy Neuhofer has been named Faculty Marshal for all events taking place during the college's Silver Anniversary Year, with the responsibility of planning and coordinating going to Vice President for Public Affairs, Allan J. Powers.

"I hope that from this point on," said President Southard, "we will have an opening Pontifical Mass to begin each school year. I also look forward to the time that the church will be filled and we will have to have an outdoor P.A. system for the whole school to hear the mass."

COMMENTARY

Another Vietnam?

We have had two undeclared wars since World War II. In Korea we had a major war, and I was there. Then, in Vietnam, we took tremendous numbers of casualties with vast expenditures of many billions of dollars. Under no circumstances could you look back and say those were not wars, but they never were declared wars.

After those wars I made a pledge to myself. I prayed to God that I would never have to be involved in sending our young men to war; but if I did, I was not going to have the responsibility for sending them without them knowing why they were there, without the American people knowing why they were there, without there being a commitment, and without us determining that if we are going to fight a war, we are going to fight under circumstances in which we can say we have won.

Recently, I have been hearing many say about Central America: "Look out, this is another Vietnam." I don't really share that feeling, but I have that feeling about Lebanon. I have it every night when I am trying to sleep. I have that feeling when I wake up at night — and I have been waking up at night — and I have it every morning when I get up.

The War Powers Act should be invoked immediately, triggering a national debate on our growing involvement in Lebanon. Involving the act is not a referendum on administration policy there; it should not be a partisan issue.

Article I, Section 8, of the Constitution gives Congress the responsibility to make decisions on the commitment of armed forces abroad. Thus, whether a senator believes that our troops should be taking fire in Beirut right now, whether we should or should not be there, it is our responsibility to the Constitution and the public to invoke the act.

As a bipartisan body, we should and must conclude that the escalation of violence and loss of Marine lives has triggered the act. To maintain that our Marines are not facing actual hostilities is not only a myth but it certainly is a disservice to the American people and to the Marines and their families.

In invoking the War Powers Act, we should not add 120 days to the time the President has to come back for congressional authorization; we should not add 18 months or 12 months. Neither should we prejudge the issue. We should simply invoke the act; then, when the President begins to consult with Congress we can gather the facts and make an informed judgment on our policy in Lebanon. Doing this in an environment of national debate will produce understanding and hopefully gain consensus and public support that is so essential.

This is our opportunity to handle this critical matter in the right way. It is our duty and our responsibility; we in Congress cannot shirk it. We must see that the law of the land, the War Powers Act, is complied with. Then, we must fact the Lebanon issue and ask the hard questions.

What is our purpose there? Do we have a purpose there that we should commit blood and our men's lives for? Is there a way of winning in the situation? How long will it take, what toll will it take and will it all be worth it? For answers to these and other questions we must search, and the best answers will come if we do it together.

I remember so vividly 1971, my freshman year in the Senate. We were beginning to realize we had entered into a situation in Vietnam where we were not going to have a policy of trying to win. We had drawn lines which we would not cross. Our troops were fighting with their hands tied behind their backs. We were taking those heavy casualties. And too many members of Congress were saying: "Well, it wasn't our decision to send the troops there. Now that they are there, we can't cut off the support. So, what can we do?"

It would be unconscionable to allow this to happen again.

Senator Lawton Chiles

Committee to choose Homecoming royalty

By MICHAEL SHAW
Monarch Staff Writer

While Alumni Homecoming/Parents Weekend is an important event to most students because of the selection of a Homecoming King and Queen, not much is known about the actual process involved.

Each year a Selection Committee is comprised of the presidents of SGA, IFC, CUB, Panhellenic, and chosen members of the staff and administration. This committee selects the five King candidates and the five Queen candidates. This being done, the job of the Selection Committee ends and the job of the Alumni, or Homecoming Committee begins.

Being composed of strictly alumni, this committee talks with the ten candidates, asking them a general question like, as John Fiengo, Director of Alumni Affairs, suggested: "Why did you choose Saint Leo College?" The question is asked at a dinner designed to afford the committee an opportunity to get to know the ten candidates.

After the dinner, the group of Alumni convene in private to choose the new Queen and King. Fiengo, himself a Saint Leo graduate, is in charge of the entire Homecoming weekend and all that it entails. That responsibility includes organizing the participating campus clubs which help throughout the weekend. "If not for the fraternities, sororities, clubs and organizations which are so actively involved with Alumni Homecoming/Parent's Weekend," said Fiengo, "it would not succeed."

The members of the 1983-84 Homecoming Committee are: Richard Johnson '68, Dennis Duffy '69, Maria Crosby '69, Mary Cabot '71, Martha Andrews '74, Eleanor K. Grudzinski '74, William F. Jeffries, Jr. '75, Kevin McGeehan '76, Thomas Bonfield '77, Mary Lachance '77, Patricia Fiengo '79, Curt Reilly '80, Doug Zerbe '81, and Ingrid Forbes '82.

Freshmen instructors:

John C. Todd, III joined the Division of Business Administration as an Assistant Professor of Business. He holds a Bachelor of Arts degree from Athens College and a M.B.A. from the State University of New York.

Robert M. Rubin, who holds a Bachelor of Arts degree from the University of South Florida, also has joined Saint Leo College as Assistant Professor of Business.

Sister Patricia Remington, I.H.M., who holds a Doctorate in Education from Wayne State University, a Master of Arts degree in education from the University of Detroit, and a Bachelor of Arts degree in English from Marygrove College, has joined Saint Leo College as an Assistant Professor of Education in the Division of Education.

Dr. Walter P. Poznar, who holds a Doctorate in English and Comparative Literature from Indiana University, Master of Arts and Bachelor of Arts degree from Washington Square College, New York University, joined the Division of Humanities as Professor of Humanities.

Lynn Decker joined the Division of Physical Education as a part-time soccer coach. He holds a Bachelor of Education degree in Physical Education from the University of Miami.

The National Endowment for the Humanities has announced a new grants program for individuals under 21 to carry out their own non-credit humanities research projects during the summer of 1984. The Younger Scholars Program will award up to 100 grants nationally for outstanding research and writing projects in such fields as history, philosophy and the study of literature. These projects will be carried out during the summer of 1984. The application deadline is November 15, 1983.

A booklet of guidelines and application instructions should be available for photocopying at the campus student placement office, or write to: Younger Scholars Guidelines, Room 426, The National Endowment for the Humanities, Washington, D.C. 20506.

Pre Civil War South comes to Saint Leo on Thursday and Friday

By PAMELA SCHUESSLER
Monarch Arts Writer

Ante-bellum refers to the expanse of time "before the war," and, in connection with the deep South, that period before the Civil War. The term ante-bellum South conjures up mint juleps, moonlight, magnolias, the aristocratic virtues of hospitality, honor, noblesse oblige, along with the aristocratic vices: hot tempers, profanity, overindulgence and a certain stubborn obstinacy. These were the days of elaborate plantations which housed sultry and delicate Southern belles: beautiful, graceful, accomplished in social charm, bewitching coquetry, yet strangely steadfast in soul.

Saint Leo College will undertake a venture to re-create an aura of this ante-bellum South, on October 28, as part of the Creative South Festival directed by Jackie Bryan, Dr. Sledge, Dr. Reynolds, Mrs. Snyder and Donna Cusumano. The Festival will feature dance, music, food and games, all typical of the era, and will be preceded on October 27 by a panel discussion focusing on Southern drama.

The discussion will be held in the College Theatre at 7:00 p.m. and will feature, as panelists, Dr. Dirk Budd and Dr. James Woodard of Saint Leo College, and Dr. Warren Leamon from the University of Georgia. Moderating the discussion will be Dorothy Smiljanich, the Tampa Tribune's drama critic. Prior to the panel discussion, each of the panelists will deliver a paper on Tennessee Williams. Dr. Woodard will discuss "Shame and Shamelessness in 'A Streetcar Named Desire,'" at 11:00 a.m.; Dr. Budd will talk about "The Existential Williams," at 2:00 p.m.; and Dr. Leamon will examine "Tennessee Williams and Southern Literature," at 3:00 p.m. All three papers will be presented in the College Theatre.

Restuarant Management: A unique concentration

By EDWARD ST. IVAN
Monarch Features Writer

Restaurant management is one of those unique concentrations that combines talent and creativity with excellent opportunities for employment. The brochure Saint Leo College publishes on restaurant management says that 250,000 people every year for the next ten years will be needed in food service. The food and beverage industry is a $144 billion industry and represents five percent of the gross national product, according to Mr. Anthony Franco, vice president of General Mills Restaurant Group. However, Mr. Peter Kirby, director of the Saint Leo Restaurant Management Program says, "Somebody that can't work under pressure, or doesn't like detailed work, may not appreciate the opportunities that are available."

Kirby, former Manager of Management Development for Red Lobster, says a career in restaurant management at Red Lobster is only open to candidates with a college degree in that field.

Unlike social work, musical theatre, or elementary education, the restaurant management concentration does not have any admission requirements and, like the three concentrations mentioned above, is designed for employment after college. The restaurant management concentration consists of basic studies I, basic studies II, foundation courses in business, courses in restaurant management, and electives. In addition to these requirements, restaurant management concentrators have to fulfill an 800 hours of work in a restaurant requirement. Right now there are approximately a dozen concentrators in the program.

A graduate from this program could possibly run a two billion dollar a year restaurant operation. "It is fascinating because of the opportunity to rise quickly in the organization and be able to directly apply much of the course content they will take at Saint Leo," says Kirby.

In addition to being Director of the Restaurant Management Program, Kirby is assistant chairman of the Business Division. He has a M.B.A. from Syracuse University and is studying toward a Doctor of Philosophy in Adult Education at the University of South Florida.

A restaurant management club is on the horizon and "Saint Leo is developing an industry advisory committee for the program," Kirby added.

A Timely Trip With Brother Person

What do you say to a massacred people? "You will beg our pardon, my brothers?" Or perhaps: "You will forgive us won't you? We know not what we did."

The Indians were here in Florida for 10,000 years before the white or black man came. During the period of discovery by the Spanish, the Timucua tribe inhabited the area of Florida around Saint Leo and most of the coast from below Tampa Bay up to the panhandle.

A proud and beautiful people, the Timucua tribe worked very hard to breed beauty, strength and stature. Their physical fitness program makes those of the present day look easy, and in stature they were a head taller than the Spanish.

To accomplish this, the council would pick the tallest and most beautiful bride for the chief. To this end, one chief went so far as to marry his mother and had several children by her. There is no record as to what his father thought of this, they only indicate his father then no longer lived with his mother.

The Timucua tribe, for all their effort, did not survive and the Indians of the present are the Seminoles. They came from the north around 1730 and are not one tribe, but the renegades of many tribes, all of the Creek culture. "Seminole" means runaway. Outcasts or not, these people had what it took to survive in spite of natural and unnatural elements. Yes, I mean hurricanes, droughts, and the white man. And I do mean the white man. At this point in time, the black man was a slave, and either kept out of the fight with the Indian or joined him. They only fought alongside the white man when forced. It was the conflict with the Indians, in part, that caused the Spanish to release Florida to America.

I don't need to tell you that this was only the beginning, not an end to the fight. In 1858, after three Indian wars, only 125 Indians were left in Florida, and they were moved to reservations around the Lake Okeechobee area.

What do you say to a massacred people. "But you massacred our Colonel Dade in 1835." And they in turn can counter with plundered villages and lost homelands. What do we say then? "Yes, but you hit us back first!" "But we were here first!" Sounds like a very childish game doesn't it. A very grim, tragic game indeed.

Circle K has come a long way in 47 years

By DELTON FARQUHARSON
Monarch Correspondant

Circle K began in 1936 as a service organization for college men. However, the first club was not organized until 1947 at Carthage College, Illinois. Gradually, the number of clubs increased and spread over to Canada and the Caribbean. Therefore, an International Organization, "Circle K International" was born to coordinate the activities of all existing clubs. In February of 1973, women were accepted as members of Circle K International.

Saint Leo Circle K was chartered in 1963, and on numerous occasions was recognized as an outstanding organization on campus. The club participates on campus and in the neighboring communities to help the weak and unfortunate in society.

As a club, Circle K offers students the opportunity to come into personal contact with the social and environmental problems society faces, and then challenges students to find solutions to such problems. At the 25th Annual Convention of Circle K International, held in Atlanta, a new theme and motto was adopted. The theme for the next two years is "Achieve Unity Through Service" and the motto is "Leaders through Service." The theme this year emphasizes the need to better our families - the building blocks of society. Circle K's at Saint Leo and across the world will attempt to weld the family into one cohesive unit and in doing so, will "Achieve Unity Through Service."

This year the Saint Leo Circle K executive board consists of Mary Ann DeMeo - president; Elouise Hill - vice-president; Gavin Bellamy - treasurer; Joann Meier - corresponding secretary; Carl Weinhoff - recording secretary; and Cheryl Hill, Nicholas Fox, Sidney Smith, Rodney Garcia and Dwayne Dupigny - directors.

Alumni Spotlight

By Greg Cason

Brian Dayett started off his major league baseball career with the New York Yankees the right way. His debut came Sunday, September 18th, in the 8th inning against the Orioles when Dayett singled to center field, followed by a base hit by Willie Randolph. A double play broke up the scoring threat by ending the inning, but Dayett had made his point.

Dayett was born in Deep River Connecticut; he graduated in 1975 from Valley Regional High. From there he came to Saint Leo College and played baseball for the Monarchs from 1976 to 1978. Brian was a Physical Education concentrator and a member of the Alpha Sigma Chi fraternity.

Brian started every game his junior year, a total of 42 games, and earned some impressive stats. His overall batting average was .381, with six home runs, and 39 RBI's. His overall fielding average was .864.

After his junior year, Dayett elected to go pro and was picked up by the minor leagues on the strength of his batting. In 1982, Brian played for the Nashville Sounds and hit 34 home runs. This year Brian played for the Columbus Clippers and hit 35 runs before being picked up by the Yankees. He averaged 102 RBI's for the last two seasons. Brian plays left field for the Yankees despite his height of only 5'10". Brian has not let his height, or anything else, stop him from becoming successful.

Faculty art displayed

The talents of Joseph Geiger, Professor of Art, and Mrs. Karen Phillips, part-time instructor of art at Saint Leo College, will be on exhibition during the Fall Faculty Art Show which will open Monday, October 24, and run through Friday, October 28, from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. daily in Duncan Lounge. An all aqueous media will be on display for this semester's show. An opening reception will be held on Monday, October 24, at 7 p.m. with the artists and is open to the public, as is the art show, at no charge.

"Why did you choose Saint Leo College?"

Patty Mariner

Because my parents liked it here, and after I tried a state university I decided to try the extreme opposite; I did and I love it.

HELENE COLON

I wanted to go to a private school. Here classes are small and students are able to have a one-to-one relationship with the faculty making it easier to understand your school work.

Bill Lacombe

I wanted to go to a Catholic school in the South. When I saw Saint Leo I knew it was where I wanted to go.

My family moved to Florida, and my father preferred a small school to protect me from outside worries of everyday life, and to seclude me so I could concentrate on studying.

I came to Saint Leo College because I really enjoy the dance curriculum, and I'm staying here because of that and the friendly people that I've met.

Ricky Dale

Because of baseball, and also it's close to home.

Donald McDonald

Because of it's fine academic standing, and small school atmosphere; also because it's in the South.

James Floyd Gage

I chose Saint Leo because I received a baseball scholarship. I also enjoy going to a smaller school.

Woman's volleyball team scores a point in victory against Warner Southern.

Women's volleyball begins '83 season on the right track

The Lady Monarchs, looking to rebound from a 7-14 record a year ago, got on the right track with a season opening 15-8, 15-13, 15-5 victory over Warner Southern. Coach Paula Smith's squad returns three starters from a year ago: senior Jean McIntosh, and sophomores Marie Kotte and Jeana Moore. Two freshmen and one transfer also will be counted on for help. Anna Keen of Saint Augustine and Edna Aquila of Miami, along with junior transfer Stacy Davis, could be possible starters. The Monarchs will battle for one of the top four positions in the Sunshine State Conference. If they place in the top four they will qualify for post season action. They must contend with conference powers Florida Southern and the University of Tampa, as well as UCF if they hope to see post season action.

The Monarchs played Palm Beach Community College and lost a five set thriller 15-7, 15-6, 13-15, 11-15, 8-15, and then rebounded to defeat Weber State 15-11, 15-8 and Southeastern 15-6, 15-12. The squad traveled to Lake Wales and played a tri-match against Clearwater Christian and Warner Southern. They defeated Clearwater 15-10, 15-3, but lost to Warner Southern 15-8, 6-15, 15-10.

Soccer team opens season with 6-0 victory over Warner Southern

The Saint Leo soccer program received a shot in the arm in the form of a season opening victory over Warner Southern, 6-0. Freshmen Reed Camron scored 3 goals and Gino Montagno, Steve Martel, and Kevin Wilson each added a goal for the Monarchs. Coach Decker said, "The team was lucky to win, Warner Southern went through our back line like sand through a sieve. If it wasn't for John Murphy and Camron they would have beaten us."

"The Monarchs, however, looked flat against UCF and came up losers, 6-0. The team rebounded to defeat Palm Beach Atlantic, 1-0, on a goal by Kenny Betz. "We didn't know anything about this team and luck was again on our side," coach Decker commented after the game. The squad traveled to Deland and "totally dominated" Stetson, 2-0. Steve Lauristen, one half of the Miami Curley connection, scored what proved to be the winning goal. Kenny Betz's second goal of the year, and the goalkeeping of Clay Grant, helped secure the win.

The team then traveled to Biscayne and lost, 7-0. Even with the two lopsided losses, the team has already shown considerable improvement over last year's team.
